Hullo,

it seems there is a drastic and highly undemocratic attempt to close Prince's Parade in Hythe to traffic in anticipation of development in that area. As far as I know, that planning permission is still being discussed and the plans to build have not been approved.

The closure of that road would make dramatic inroads into the tourist traffic in the area, prohibiting the anglers who fish there and impeding mothers with young children being able to park and descend to the beach. This is also going to curtail visits by day trippers from outside the area. Is this going to be a measure to privatise this beach? It seems a sinister proposal.

As a regular user of the road, the beach, the canal in that area, I am determinedly against both the proposed building and against the closure of the road.
Please take my opinion into account.

Faithfully
